OTTAWA (CP) — Former Liberal transport minister Paul Hellyer accused the government before a hushed Commons Thursday of following morally disastrous econ-omic policies and creating tragedy for thousands of Canadian families.

"Technically and finan-eially, the government's policy has been a near total disaster," Mr. Hellyer said, "Morally, it has been a total disaster."

The former minister's carefully delivered, biting, attack held the full attention of about 40 MPs in the Commons during debate on a Consequite motion criticizing the government for creating unemployment and implementing policies which have failed to curb inflation.

Civil War Hits Pakistan As East Tries Secession

In Dacca, East Pakistan, young riflecarrying women parade to mark Pakistan Day. Today the strife-torn geographically-split nation's political crisis took a new turn as President Gen. Research done by fired provincial government biolo-gist Dr. A. H. Acara will be analysed by federal fisheries

Acara says he was fired because his research indi-cated the government's policy of leaving reservoirs un-cleared to save money was killing fish and could wipe out the entire sports fishery on the Columbia River.

He was fired March 5 two hours notice after heading research on the biological effects of the Columbia River treaty dams for the B.C. Recreation and Conservation Department for six years.

Federal Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said in Ottawa he spoke to Acara last weekend while visiting Victoria and asked him to send his mater-ial to the department.

Davis said the federal department would become interested in the situation directly if there is proof that a problem needs solution, since the Columbia River waterway is an internati

NEW DELHI - Civil war broke out in East Pakistan today as West Pakistan rushed in troops to put down an armed revolt aimed at winning independence for the east area of the partitioned nation.

Heavy casualties were reported. Pakistan President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan declared martial law, banned all political activity in Pakistan and directed his force of 70,000 troops to quell the uprising in East Pakistan.

BACKGROUND:

Suspicion, Fear In Two Pakistans

The outbreak of civil war in East Pakistan is the out-growth of friction and deep suspicion that has plagued the widely separated halves of Pakistan since the nation was founded with the partition of India in 1947. The central figure in the current hostilities is Shelk Mujibur Rahman, 51, a vet-eran fighter for East Pakistan autonomy, who is leader of the powerful Awami (Peo-

The league a chieved a crushing victory in national elections last December.

But the east earns valuable foreign ex-change for the country be-cause it produces about 80 per cent of the world's raw jute. The east has blamed "big business" in the west for much of its backwardness.

TANGUAGE MAKES RIFT

Shiek Mujib says insufficient funds for East Pakistan's development have been allocated by the central government. He said there is meagre representation of East Pakistan in the armed forces particularly at higher forces, particularly at higher levels, and in central govern-ment departments.

Notary Public Gets 3 Years For Going Too Far Too Fast

Notary public William E. Williams, 30, of 3115 Parlow, was sentenced Thursday to three years in prison for stealing 3156,439 after he was described by Judge William Ostler as a man who "tried to get too far too fast" at the expense of others.

Williams, who earlier pleaded guilty to two charges of theft by conversion involv-ing 42 counts, committed the thefts between November 1969 and Feb. 16, 1971.

Ostler termed the thefts "larceny on a grand scale" and added that the submission of defence lawyer Robert Heath that the accused was "stumbling in an unmapped wilderness" was hard to accept.

If you went on looks alone, this guy would never win a beauty contest. Short, squat, coplously endowed with short, sharp spines and with two alert, dark eyes gazing out of as fearsome a face as you'd wish to meet he looked like a throw-back to the dinosaurs.

Despite these cosmetic short-comings he was a star-attraction at Miracle Beach Provincial Park last summer and, for awhile, it was even suggested he might rate the honored position of a new species for Vancouver Island.

His story at Miracle began as many others do at that popular summer resort, with a to usle-haired youngster standing at the door of the park museum, clutching something in her grubby little hand and demanding to know what it was.

This kind of opener is routine for the four naturalists who maintain the museum and operate the nature program in the park. The question comes every day and sometimes several times a day.

Most of the offerings are little more than the common things a youngster is likely to pick up along the park trails or on the beach: a garter snake, a sand dollar, a few clam shells, even the odd butterfly.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

Sometimes, if the specimen is alive and in good condition, it is added to the nature house display for a day or two. But most are returned to the wild after a brief explanation for the youngster.

It's a good system. Youngsters are the world's greatest les collectors and if something fas "good" is to be found, the kids will find it, So it was with our spiny, prehistoric, he six-inch-long "monster." He'd turned up on one of the trails a in the campsite.

As usual, the naturalists on duty turned to the books. It's part of the teaching process. Get the kids involved. Look things up for them and pretty soon they learn that there's a lot of answers in the books.

Well, to make a long story short, our throw-back turned out to be a Horned Lizard, a "monster" in his own right, but a monster far from home.

Put him down in the arid, rock and sand country around Osoyoos in the Okanagan Valley and he'd quickly blend in with his surroundings. But here in the humid Vancouver Island rainforest, he looked completely out of place.

The question was, how did he get here. Not under his own steam. Even at top speed. Horned Lizards spend a great deal of time right where they are; contemplating their world through half closed eyes.

To have negotiated the miles of mountain, forest and gulf waters between his proper home and Miracle

Beach - on his own - seemed out of the question.

He was obviously someone's pet which, in the bustle of camp, had escaped. The following notice — "Found, one Horned Lizard. Owner can claim at Nature House" — failed to elicit any response and our monster became part of the Miracle Beach Nature House show.

In the comfort of a stout box, with a few rooks from which to do his contemplating, armed with a heat lamp to simulate the arid desert climate, and periodically provided with an ample supply of beach hoppers, flying ants and sundry other of the insectivora, our monster thrived,

During the day the warmth of the lamp kept him fairly active. Like the books say, he'd puff himself-up, open his mouth and threaten when handled.

But it was all bluff, for despite his fearsome countenance he was docile as a

At night, without the warmth of the lamp, he'd go into a kind of stupor, his blood cooling as the temperature dropped. Often in the morning he'd be as stiff as a board, quickly coming to life when his lamp was turned on.

His most active momentswere mealtime. Several ants in his box at one time seemed to confuse him but one at a time he could handle.

He's fix the frantic insect in his baleful stare and in a motion so quick as to be almost invisible, he'd have it.

Water held no attraction for him. A dish of it in his box was completely ignored. Apparently he got all the liquid he needed from the food he ate.

He led a pleasant life. He was never heard to complain. And when the summer was over he went back to the Okanagan Valley the way we think he came, courtesy of man.

By 1940 Ottawa had obtained the consent of all the provinces to an amendment of the B.N.A. Act and, with the amendment, the Unemployment Insurance Act of 1940 came into effect. It is this Act which, with the amendments of 1955, stands as the chief means to ease the pains of unemployed Canadians.

Last June the federal labor department headed by Mr. Bryce Mackasev announced a new government policy towards unemployment, which he hopes will be attuned to the needs of the 1970s. The labor department's white paper on fundamental revisions of the 1940 act enunciated this general approach: "If unemployment insurance is to do more than alleviate the financial problems of the unemployed, if it is to reflect the shift in thinking from the welfare state to the service state, then a new, reoriented program must provide an efficient pipeline to vocational counselling, job opportunities, and other manpower programs in order to help the unemployed requalify for jobs under changing technological condi-

> Legislation now in process, with minor changes, embodies the policy statement of last June. Top benefits will reach $100 per week compared with the current $53; benefits will be paid to those who have left their jobs through illness or pregnancy; qualifications for benefits will be liberalized and maximum premiums paid into the insurance scheme will be lowered. If unemployment falls below four per cent Ottawa will cease contributing and the plan will become wholly supported by employers and employees, although regional disparities will be taken into consideration; coverage will be greatly increased with the addition of about 1,200,000 participants.

The bill is an attempt to cope with the disruptive effects of the current revolution in knowledge and technology by directly linking unemployment benefits with the need for claimants to keep informed of job possibilities through other agencies associated with the plan. Mr. Mackasey emphasizes that the program is designed to deal with problems of the early future, but it could be no less valuable for its immediate effects. If securely based on a self-supporting financial structure, and geared to equip workers for new types of jobs as they occur, the plan should meet a modern

Let that stand as the epitaph of the so much less than glorious that even those who claim great things for it do not sound as if they have convinced themselves. It is an appropriate epitaph for if the invasion had any rational purpose at all it was, in the familiar tration, "to save American lives."

This is not a purpose any American can oppose, but how high a price must the rest of the world, particularly the Indochinese, pay to rescue Americans from a decade of blunders? In the Laotian operation alone, taking Saigon's figures at their dubious face value, more than 12,000 North Vietnamese and 1,100 South Vietnamese have been killed; if in addition 4,500 South Vietnamese wounded and missing are considered, these figures suggest that perhaps 25,000 military casualties have been suffered. (At least 55 American helicopter crewmen have been killed, and 335 wounded.)

or Saigon, any more than in Hanoi, bothers to make such estimates before launching big military strikes, and it is only weeks or months later that the refugees and the wounded and the dead begin to make their miserable marks. it was only last week that semi-official figures were obtained from Senator Kennedy's subcommittee on refugees: 125,000 to 150,000 civilian casualties from military action by both sides in South Vietnam in 1970, with 25,000 to 35,000 civilians killed.

These figures have not so far been disputed here or in Saigon. They do not include civilian casualties in Cambodia Laos. They are included in the imated 1.1 million civilian casualties, including 325,000 deaths, in South Vietnam since 1965, when Americans entered the war in force; of the total of those casualties, about a third are thought to have been children under 13.

Change Doubtful

It would probably be a mistake, nevertheless, to think that the Laotian repulse will lead Nixon to a significant change of policy. If he accedes to the request General Abrams probably will make for a slowdown in American withdrawal, the President will wreck his domestic political stance; and he is more likely than ever to think that pulling out at a faster rate would open both Saigon and any remaining American forces to

So the long, costly, shabby policy of withdrawing while propping up Saigon and ravaging Indochina probably will go on, without any new attempt to negotiate an end to the slaughter. It is a policy of kicking them off the skids so American bird can fly.

It would seem that the Board of Governors of the University of Victoria are not fulfilling the function they were appointed for. The recent, action of the Board in endorsing Bruce Partridge's policies will result in the type of situation a public "watchdog" body was designed to prevent.

Partridge's model of American adlegalistic interpretation of documents, is alien to the general and university community of Canada. By endorsing Partridge the individuals on the Board have openly opted for the American model of law over the Anglo-Canadian concept of justice based on unwrit

While this distinction may, at first seem trivial, it becomes increasingly important as one examines the implications of the American ideology. seemingly willing acceptance, by Part-ridge and now the Board, of confrontation, hard-line politics will result in the adopting of hard-line attitudes by faculty and students in response. Thus the stage is being set for incidents such as have occurred on American campuses.

Why? Upon examination of the situation I find the only person to suffer by accepting outside arbitration would be Partridge. He, and he alone, could lose from accepting the recommendations of the professional faculty association, the CAUT. The university would have some of its good faith restored to constituent groups, and the community uncertainty that now exists regarding the state of the University, not as a political astitution, but one for learning.

The Board of Governors is the only body which has the power to reverse the trend of decisions now prevalent at Uvic and restore its function as an institution for the pursuit of knowledge, not a backwater of political intrigue. The Board must respond by removing Partridge as President and reversing the trend towards confrontation, and its inevitable result, violence.—Brian Green, 2954 Westdowne Rd.

I hope you will help me rectify a situation where, not only has a young man been maligned, but where the facts falsified.

Tuesday, March 23, a young man Doug Cameron, from the Uvic Theatre Department, phoned the Dave Abbott taken by several developmental drama students who are protesting Richard Courtney's resignation from the Theatre Department. He was allowed approximately ten minutes to make his statements. Prior to his appearance on the air, Bob Higinbotham of the Martlet and members of the Steering Committee were permitted an hour to present their

A few minutes later, an unidentified third-year female student phoned in, stating that Mr. Cameron's views were plased as he was involved in the current major production which was going to the this May. She also stated that the 25 names which appear in a statement (published in The Times Monday, March 22) condemning the radical behaviour of a group of students supporting Mr. Courtney, were those of persons directly involved in this production.

Sir, as a member of this co who is going to Ottawa in May, I can tell you that Mr. Cameron is not biased by this consideration, as neither he nor the majority (18) of the 25 names which appeared in support of the petition are involved in the casting or technical management of this show; the seven students involved in the production who did sign did so of their own volition.

Mr. Cameron phoned back in an awaiting the report of a provincial royal was later informed, upon further inquiry commission set up in 1968 to study the that his message was not delivered until the show was off the air.

The future of federalism in Quebec, and the future of the Bourassa government - which denounced separatism last year and staked its future on economics - are intertwined.

Charge to Answer

Before the next provincial election, Mr. Bourassa must answer the accusations of Rene Levesque and the separatist Parti Quebecois that Quebec can never prosper to its full extent within Confederation.

At a dinner he gave for prominent American industrialists and institutional investors attending a convention that coincided with the Quebec exhibit, Bourassa pointed out that last fall's FLO crisis was a limited outburst of urban terrorism that has become unhappily common in many Western nations. This is undoubtedly true, but there was no definite response from most of the businessmen, who tend to be reticent about expressing personal political views to reporters.

There was also the question of Mr. Bourassa's plans to make French the "working language" of the province. He gave reassurances — the same he has given English-speaking residents of Quebec - that the rights of non-French residents will not be harmed. But, as one English-speaking Quebec businessman noted after the dinner, there was nothing specific about the "nitty gritty of what a Clearly this principle is one of our hang ups today. Few would argue that our culture is well adapted to the environment: as we destroy it, we destroy ourselves. The trend has begun. We helped to destroy whales and with it, the whaling industry in British Columbia. Perhaps if our western culture had "reverence for life" or "live in harmony with nature" philosophies instead of "multiply and subdue the earth" our environment and future would look better.

Four Per Cent Drop From 1960 to 1968

Enrolment figures from about half of Canada's universities were studied. They indicated the first-year enrolment in physical science courses have dropped from about 15 per cent in 1960 to about 15 per cent in 1960 to about 11 per cent in 1968.

A parallel decline was noticed by analyzing second year enrolment figures.

One university, the University of Waterloo, distinguished itself by actually reversing the general trend during the same period. There, science enrolments have increased from 16 per cent to 46 per cent during the past decade.

The University of Laval showed a lesser increase.

The reasons for their success in attracting students interested in science are not yet understood.

It should be noted that while so ie no e enrolments were dropping all across Canada, general student numbers were climbing by about 25 per cent. This had the effect of keeping science closes constant in numbers classes constant in numbers during the past four years.

National Research Council radio astronomer L. R. McNarry, who was loaned to the CAP for the study, said in developing in physical science enrolments during 1969.

McNarry believes the gen-eral decline in interest of young people in the physical sciences is part of a long-term drift away from sym-pathy with science and tech-nology — a drift interrupted only briefly, he says, by the

Since Hoppe wrote that column a few days ago, be has gotten 941 letters. That's a lot of mail, and that doesn't count the letters sent to the papers his column appears in around the country. Nine hundred and twenty-turee of those letters agreed with what he'd said, 18 didn't.

They weren't from young people. As Hoppe says, younger people have felt this way so long, they don't see anything remarkable in such thoughts appearing in the metropolitan, press of Cleveland, Chicago, Philadelphia land, Chicago, Philadelphia and Seattle. No, these letters came from older people, from tion worker.

"What they said," Hoppe wrote in a subsequent column, "most of them, was column, "most of them, was that they, too, had seen their love for their country eroded by this endless war. And they too mourned it. And they signed their names."

Hoppe had the macho to sit down and write a piece of truth that might have got him fired, and he found out he wasn't alone. About half of the 120 papers that normally print his column had the guts to run this one and they found out that they weren't alone.

This treason is rampant and it has never been stronger than since the Laos invasion. Our men aren't in there — or so the government assures us — so we feel perfectly free to root for the visiting team.

Strangely, the move closely follows such jazzy campaigns as one to persuade customers to pay extra for cheques with pretty pictures of sailboats, and one for imitation alligator hide wallets. Perhaps these come-ons failed and that's why the banks are resorting to surcharging plain, old, dull, one-color cheques with nothing more personal on them than an illegible computer code.

Liberals Rally Against Attack On Pelletier

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — The government was placed on the defensive Thursday as the Commons opposition attacked publication of State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's book The October Crisis.

The Conservatives and New Democrats tried to force emergency debate on the subject and New Democrat Leader T. C. Douglas called for a royal commission into last fall's events.

Serious Discrepancies in Facts

Mr. Douglas said there were shouldn't have published his accerious discrepancies of fact between Mr. Pelletier's written account and statements made to Payliament last October at the had been responsible, as a cabineight of the FLQ terrorist crisis in Quebec.

The attack, which ate up most of Thursday's 40-minute question period, was expected to continue today.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said Mr. Pelletier considered."

Mr. Douglas, in another motion for an emergency debate, issue of public order soon will said the book "called into question the grounds on which Parliament was asked to enact the Public Order (Temporary Measures) Act."

Mr. Douglas said the House should debate immediate repeal of the public order law, which is to lapse April 30 unless repealed earlier or extended.

Speaker Lucien Lamoureux my office checked the book to rejected both motions on grounds there would be opportunity for debate soon.

Mr. Trudeau's challenge brought a quick response from Mr. Diefenbaker, who singled out several passages in the book as "complete contradictions of cabinet solidarity." The passages, as translated by Mr. Diefenbaker:

Mr. Diefenbaker, jowls wagging, asked Mr. Trudeau if these views "represent the type of views he placed before the country on behalf of the government last October: That insurrection was here and they had to act?"

"Of course that isn't the position," Mr. Trudeau replied, Mr. Diefenbaker, interjected that cabinet solidarity had been broken.

Mr. Trudeau began to quôte

The prime minister delivered the quote:

Arnold Peters (NDP—Timiskaming) suggested that Mr. Pelletier's book be made an appendix to Hansard, the daily record of Commons debates, so members could read it.

Mrs. Elford said Oak Bay had not been notified of its opportunities in the federal scheme but as soon as it was, she would be "anxious" to get going.

Loffmark Introduces Disease-Carrier Bill

A bill enabling tighter control of communicable disease carriers and allowing regional districts to charge for health and environmental control inspections was introduced in the legislature. Thursday by Health Minister Ralph Loffmark.

Loffmark said the type of controls available in the past for the control of tuberculosis have been broadened to in clude s m a l l p o x , typhoid fever, leprosy and other diseases that may be designated by the cabinet.

The changes reflect new travel patterns in which hundreds of people from other countries may arrive at Vancouver airport in one planeload, he said. The powers contained in the bill would have been helpful in the typhoid outbreak aboard the Oronsay ocean liner in Vancouver harbor in 1969, he sald.

DETEENTIONS

Persons disobeying orders of a health officer under the bill could be detained for periods up to one year.

New powers for levying of charges for health inspections were introduced last session in a broader form which would also have permitted charges for vaccinations and other services.

The bill was withdrawn after opposition MLAs complained about it last year.

Loffmark said it was never his intention to charge for anything but health inspection and environmental control-inspections of things such as septic tanks, public swimming pools and sewer systems. NEW REVENUE

He said the charges would be an important new source of revenue for regional districts which choose to take over from union boards of health in their areas.

The revenue source would be a significant bargaining point in negotiations already under way with some regional of the health powers.

MACDONALD SUGGESTS PROVINCE LAND BANK

A private member's bill to set up a $10 million provincial land bank was introduced in the legislature Thursday by Alex Macdonald (NDP-Vancouver East).

The bill puts in the form of proposed legislation earlier proposals from the New Democratic Party that a land bank be established to acquire key parcels of land likely to increase markedly in value because of public works.

He also emphasized that the move, taken in a cabinet order this week, does not mean the government accepts any liability. The case will be fought, he said.

The petitioners in the suit are United Contractors, United Cartage Ltd. and Collingwood Equipment Ltd.

The suit concerns a security bond posted by the firms and held back by the government after the fire broke out at their conception.

Vancouver Hotel Tax Scheme Shot Down by Legislature

the city of Vancouver has been headed off at the pass again by the provincial government on a money matter. In a bill introduced in the legislature Thursday, Muni-

The switch — by making illegal what was legal — is expected to throw Vancouver municipal officials into a turmoil, following earlier government refusals to allow a hotel room tax by the city. EXPERIMENT STALLS Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell teed off on the federal Indian Affairs department in the legislature Thursday over the Cape Mudge issue.

Campbell expressed "complete and utter disappointment" with continuing delays in getting federal approval for an experimental Indian municipality at Cape Mudge on Quadra Island.

He said the Indian Affairs department is the "most lock-step, bureaucratic boondoggle anyone could ever imagine" and added that the department has apparently "captured" Jean Chretlen, the minister who Campbell said has shown a willingness to see the municipality go ahead.

Campbell said it appears that federal "bureaucrats" are "scared out their skin" that the experiment would work at Cape Mudge.

Now! True beer taste in a malt liquor brew.

Church Housing

Urged for Aged

Churches should be required to provide housing facilities for the aged if they are to continue being exempt from property taxes, Herb Capozzi

Big unions and corporations should also be providing such facilities under a federal-provincial financing program, he said.

He called for a "pilot

The settlement, which followed exactly the recommendations of a mediation officer, also copied the agreement signed earlier with Saanich employees.

The wage increases — 7½ per cent in both 1971 and 1972 — were strongly criticized by four aldermen and Mayor Courtney Haddock as being out of line with the ability of the city to pay, but only aldermen Robert Baird, Peter Pollen and Tom Christie voted against the measure.

The Origin of The Triple Crown.

The Triple Crown in the United States refers to the winning of the Belmont Stakes, the Kentucky Derby and the Preakness; and in Canada to the winning of the Queen's Plate, the Breeders Stakes and the Prince of Wales Stak

It originated in England in 1853 with the consecutive winning by 'West Australia' of the Derby, the St. Leger Stakes, and the 2000 Guinea Stakes.

The idea and the name have gained in popularity over the years with the result that other forms of competitive sport such as golf, baseball and motor racing have established their own form of the Triple Crown.

In searching for a name that implied a high standard of excellence for this four-year old whisky, we turned to the world of competitive sport.

Triple Crown was our choice because it referred to an award achieved only by contenders of exceptional ability and only then after years of painstaking preparation, patience and skill.

These are ingredients as necessary to the blending of fine Canadian whisky as to the training of a great champion.

The name Triple Crown is now becoming recognized and accepted by an increasing number of discerning Canadians as a symbol of achievement in the field of Canadian whisky as well as competitive sport.

HEARING ON CHURCH PROPERTY

Hostel Rezoning Set April

April 8 is the day Cool-Aid will find out if the city still wants to back the creation of a youth hostel and activity centre in the Emmanuel Baptist Church, 1900 Fernwood.

The date for the public hearing to rezone the church for hostel use was set by council. Thursday after the rezoning bylaw was given first approval.

Only Ald, Robert Baird, a staunch Cool-Ald opponent, and Ald, Harold Olafson, voted against the bylaw, which creates a new zone to make way for the hostel.

Baird said the approval was being "sneaked in." Ald. Ove Witt replied that with all the publicity Cool-Ald has been given, Baird's contention is Olafson said he though there should be some assur-ance that Cool-Aid would get financing for the church before council approved it. Witt replied that the federal Solicitor Terry O'Grady explained that under the special zoning, the church land could be used only for a hostel or for a single-family residence. O'Grady said the method was perhaps "not the most desirable," way to rezone but "it may be the best way of handling this problem."

Baird called this "putting the cart before the horse," and added, "I think it's your duty to find the best way.

matter of touching on the brightest highlights that come to mind through a host of memories.

Being a regular fan of our junior Cougars, my thoughts first turn to hockey. I am one of the few left who can go back to the Stanley Cup victory of Lester Patrick's Cougars on the ice of the old Willows Arena. A mere youngster then, I can never forcet the exhibition turned in by Frank Frequickson. never forget the exhibition turned in by Frank Fredrickson in my opinion one of the most under-rated centre-ice men of his day.

All eyes were glued to the dazzling play of Howie Morenz and Auriel Joliat, the two vaunted speedsters of the Montreal Canadiens. Unimpressed by all the advance publicity on the prowess of the easterners — Fredrickson not only skated with the great Morenz but also showed him a few tricks in stekhandling wizardry.

Senior amateur hockey was also at its peak on the local scene at the same time with such players as Roy Copas, Hughie Burnett, Alex Straith, Ivan Temple and Louis Glazen—just to name a few—providing entertainment that has never reached the same level since.

Let's not forcet Patrick's second edition of the Courars.

Let's not forget Patrick's second edition of the Cougars.
Remember how Roger Leger led his whizz kids to those spinetingling overtime victories over Portland and left thousands of fans limp in their progress to the Western Hockey League

To those few fans critical of the junior Cougars — let it be remembered they are still in the stage of learning. Sure they make mistakes but what they lack in finesse is more than made up in hustle and desire. It's interesting hockey in way books.

Let's leave the winter sports scene and move on to one

Let's leave the winter sports scene and move on to one sport that has provided me with some wonderful moments—golf. How well I remember one of the greatest match-play finals in the history of the sport in Victoria — George von Elm of Salt Lake City against Bon Stein of Seattle for the Pacific Northwest amateur championship.

Played at Colwood — a real test of skill — it was a battle of two giants with von Elm the winner. For individual shots, the sporty Oak Bay course was the scene of two that stand cut in my memory. The pro who made knickers famous — Gene Sarazen — provided the first thrill. Playing the 11th hole he put his tee shot directly in back of the big tree on the right side of the fairway. Calling for an iron he lofted the ball hole he put his tee snot directly in back or the oil tree on the right side of the fairway. Calling for an iron he lofted the ball over the tree and on to the green five feet from the pin and sank the putt for an amazing three.

U.S. Open champion Ralph Guldahl, playing in the Evergreen Open—that's a few years back—was the central figure for the second masterpiece. Short with his drive on the doc-leg 15th, he uncorked a screaming second wood that was never more than 15 feet off the ground and rolled within a foot of the cup. My choice of the perfect stylist goes to former U.S. open champion Johnny Farrell. That may spark some arguments.

From the days of fiery Bill Laird and his pros performing in the ball yard located on the site of the Crystal Garden to the amateur pitching duels between Norm Forbes and Leo Holden, baseball has been one of my favorites.

It produced its share of heartaches locally. Remember Cec Garriott and his Tyees playing to a handful of faithful after clinching the Western International League championship two weeks before the schedule ended. That was just about the knockout blow to the Herculean efforts of Reg Patterson and Johnny Johnson to put pro ball on a paying basis in our town. basis in our town.

And here are some anecdotes — Dick Greco's line drive smash that hit one of the lights at Athletic Park when headed smash that hit one of the lights at Athletic Park when headed for Princess Avenue; pitcher Len Kasparavich wandering around the outfield with a lantern during a foggy night; Bob Jensen with his aspirin ball striking out 16 and walking 17 to win his first start in the WIL; import Joe Dailey pitching a shutout against the famed touring Japanese All-Stars.

The game led to one big embarrassing moment as player when my boss Archie Wills came up with a 48-point headline "Sallaway hits two home runs." My one bid for fame.

Basketball locally has been hitting the headlines in recent years by the title winning of Rawlings, now known as the Maplettes. But let's not forget the doings of the Blue Ribbons, followed by the Dominoes, Back of their triumphs was the

My one and only experience as a promoter took me into the world of boxing. At the urging of Dr. Jack Patterson and Roy Simmons of a local club I agreed to have this newspaper back an Island championship tournament. It was an affairwith a $3,000 nut to crack and I was certain my superiors would not appreciate a loss . . In addition all profits were to be turned over to the crippled children.

Imagine my feelings when a snowstorm broke just before the start of the first night's proceedings. However, the affair proved the most successful amateur boxing attraction in history with near sell-out crowds both nights. The promotion

chaps, J. C. I. (Dutchy) Edwards and Bob Dewhirst. Then there are the fishing memories. My fellow worker Bill Walker, whose column these ramblings are replacing, provided the best of all. Trolling for salmon at Brentwood he got a strike. Then his rod took a giant bend as we both shouted "boftom." After some heavy reeling he managed to take in some line and it continued to come in slowly. Looking over the stern of the boat we sighted two big eyes and a monster head.

What had happened? His original strike — jackspring — had been swallowed by a 40-pound codfish. Yes, we landed them beth. Two for one so to speak.

Landing three springs — 43½ pounds, 37½ and 35 on a spoon that had never caught a fish before and after I had left my proverbial jinx, the wife, sound asleep back at the hotel in Port Alberni is another fond memory. Borrowing a spoon and fly from Frank Sommer and hooking a 17½ pound cohoe at Cowichan Bay to win the prize of the week much to his chagrin, is another.

Looking back to the two most colorful sports figures I have met, I would not hesitate to select Abe Saperstein, dynamic owner and coach of the world famous Harlem Globe Trotters, and former world heavyweight wrestling champion Ed (Strangler) Lewis, whose psychology on what should be man's objective in life has remained with me through the years.

I regret that there are some sports and many fine athletes I have failed to mention. But it has been a great 52 years, and the sports world in general has provided me with some great and memorable moments.

Several of those named have passed along to the greatest hall-of-fame, but their feats will be remembered.

Jude Drouin tied Danny Grant's National Hockey League points record for rookies Thursday night and all with Grant's help.

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — Bunny Ahearne, president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, said Thursday: "I 'thought we had a solution for getting Canadians back in the family but the Canadians have turned it down and we're back to double area."

The Canadians want to be allowed to play professionals on their world hockey and Olympic squads.

The Canadians dropped out of this year's world championships and by doing so did not qualify for the 1972 Winter Olympics in Sapporo, Japan.

VANCOUVER — The power struggle in high school boys' basketball continued here Thursday at Pacific Coliseum. But instead of growing, it became more concentrated.

Just as Vancouver and District teams dominated the provincial tournament in the 1950s and the Vancouver Island clubs took over in the 1960s, a new power has emerged in the 1970s.

The Fraser Valley, which championed the tournament last year, Thursday virtually assured itself of a second straight title as the 26th annual event rushed through the quarter-finals.

STEWART Reports on The Outdoors

Warmer weather, which is removing the ice from lakes and thawing snow on access roads, also is whetting the appetite of Vancouver Island trout anglers.

Some devotees of this art have been landing sizable trout on sunken flies near Strathcona Bay on the North Arm of Shawnigan Lake.

Others, using worms for bait, have returned from trips to the Covichan River with hetty brown trout. Best spots to try for browns might be in, as well as upstream from McMillan Pool.

In the same general area, Fuller Lake and Downer's

Pool.

In the same general area, Fuller Lake and Dougan's Lake have been reported as good choices for balt fishermen working the bottom. Brannen Lake in the Nanaimo area is starting to show a little action and other trout catches have been recorded near the foot of Great Central Lake.

Still further north, the lower end of Comox Lake has yielded a few succulent trout but most of the other lakes in the area are still inaccessable.

Action is still slow in both the Upper and Lower Campbell lakes.

* *

Kelts are beginning to show in increasing numbers among the steelhead caught in Island streams and these spawned-out fish should be returned when caught. Best rivers to try for steelles have been the Cowichan, Nansimo. Puntledge, Oyster, Gold, Quinsam, Campbell and Salmon.

Even the salt-chuck fishermen, who have been driven off the water by high winds in past weeks, should find something to suit their fancy this weekend.

Salmon returns in Saanich Inlet consist mainly of blues and jack-springs. Best locations are well offshore near Willis Point, between Indian Bay and Sananus Island and along the Bamberton shore as far north as the log dump at Mill Bay.

A lesser concentration of the same fish may be found between McKenzie Bay and McCurdy Point.

Deep Cove has yielded up blues and a few springs are coming in from outside waters in the same vicinity.

Off Oak Bay, Fiddle Reef, Goat Island, The Gap, Trial Island and Constance Banks have produced springs up to 20 pounds by using eight to 12 ounces of weight and 75 feet of line. Other anglers are coming in with hefty cod.

Herring running up the Gorge have attracted both springs and fishermen to the Victoria Harbour mouth with best returns up to one-half mile offshore.

Waters between Beechey Head and Secretary Island have produced some big springs during the past week for fishermen working close to the shore and deep — with a minimum of one pound of weight.

Best up-Island spots to try on the weekend for springs might be along Bold Bluff in Sansum Narrows, Union Bay, Quathiaski Cove, Duncan Bay and through the narrows toward Deepwater Bay.

Blues have been caught near Crofton and Tent Island as well as in Nanaimo Harbour.

HOME GARDEN

Overcoming Wind, Salt Spray

By HILDA BEASTALL

For all the homeowners with property near or on salt water who are wondering what plants will stand up to the gales and the salt spray, here is a partial list. The material is available at one or the other of the local nurseries, at one or the other of the local nurseries, and all have been proven successful.

Other plants can certainly be tried once the garden is established and a few trees and shrubs are grown sufficiently to act as windbreaks and baffles to salt spray.

In the tree list, several pines are most useful. Austrian pine (Pinus nigra), Japanese Black pine (P. thumbergi), Scotch pine (P. sylvestris and a dwarf form (P. sylvestris nana), and the spreading Mugo pine (P. muso).

pine (P. mugo).

Among these, a gardener will find something which will give his garden a look of permanence, something which will be attractive all year, and provide shelter in time to flowering plants he may want to grow during summer.

Several deciduous trees are wind resistant and their foliage not affected by salt. These will add their quota of color and in some cases, berries. The Norway maple (Acerplatanoides), the native Vine maple (A. circinatum) can be bushy enough for a windbreak, and the Amur maple (A. ginnala) a small but colorful maple.

The native Pacific Dogwood, Cornus nuttalli, fits into the picture perfectly, with flowers in spring, good foliage all summer and colorful fruits and leaves in fall. If the property is large enough for the native Arbutus menziesi, you have the perfect tree for coastal gardens. Evergreen, flowering, fruiting, and the only evergreen tree with broad leaves native to Canada.

to Canada.

The Mountain ash (Sorbus) adds brilliant fruits in fall.

Several kinds of shrubs help to add attractive color and shapes to the seaside garden, and indeed show off to perfection against sea and sky.

Tamarix with slender whippy branches covered their whole length with the pink mist of blossoms in spring, or in summer with another variety, is a native to sandy coastal regions in Europe.

The escallomias, some with evergreen leaves, and all making fine dense shrubs, will bloom profusely and never be harmed with anything less than bitter freeze-ups. Such shrubs attract small birds to nest, for the dense twiggy growths are ideal cover.

The broad strong leaves of Phormium tenax, New Zealand-flax, add a new note, and many grey foliaged shrube fill in with year-round beauty.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

In today's deal, which came up in a recent rubber-bridge game, the correct interpretation of West's opening lead enabled our South declarer to fulfill his game contract.

Both sides vulnerable. West NORTH

4875 ∇ A K Q 9 A K * QJ74 ♦ 6 4 ♥ 8 6 2 ♦ 10 9 7 5 4 SOUTH

The bidding:
West North East South
1 Dbl. Pass 1 NT Pass 3 NT Pass Pass

Opening lead: Three of 4.

West's three of spades opening lead was captured by South's 10-spot. South per-ceived, of course, that he had eight sure winners at this point; and that only in the club suit could his ninth trick be obtained.

Had West not opened the Had West not opened the bidding, declarer would probably have entered dummy and taken the club-finesse. But in view of West's opening bid, the finesse figured to lose. And when it did, West would probably cash sufficient spades to defeat the contract. So South testidal to prove the color decided to spurn the club finesse.

Since West was known to be an honest man (he was South's brother-in-law), South knew that West possessed a maximum of five spades at the outset: West had led the three-spot, as his fourth from the highest. Therefore, he could have but one card lower than the three-spot, specifi-cally the deuce.

After winning the opening spade lead, declarer cashed four heart tricks, discarding a diamond from his own hand as West discarded a club.
Then came the ace and king of diamonds. West following with the queen and jack.
Diamonds had just been ing.

Now declarer led a spade off dummy, putting West into the lead, and knowing, simul-taneously, that West couldn't cash more than four spade tricks. And West did just that. But then had no choice but to lead a club away from his king. The board's 'queen of clubs now became declarer's ninth trick.

In a sense, declarer was lucky in finding the adversely held cards divided as they were, thus making the endplay possible. But then there was no better alternative line of play, since the club finesse was a cinch to lose. Without was a cinch to lose. Without any doubt, South deserved his victory.

Susan nodded. "Boys and girls, all kids;" she said, "And also Pete's dad who thought up lots of contests for us. We all did all of them, like seeing who could balance longest on one foot."

"Sounds fun," commented her mother. "Any prizes?" "Sort of. After each event every loser handed Pete's dad one cent, and he gave the winner a dime." The girl smiled. "I ended up seven cents to the good, and Pete told me his dad was only 45 cents down in all."

How many events were there, and how many did Susan win?

EDMONTON (CP) — Contrary to published reports, the province's legal aid program is not in financial trouble. Donald P. McLaws, president of the Law Society of Alberta, said Wednesday.

In a letter tabled in the legislature Wednesday by Attorney-General Ed Gerhart, McLaws said accrued accounts may exceed moneys on hand by the end of March but the accounts may exceed moneys on hand by the government to the law society.

He said confusion arises between the use of a cash or an accrual metrod of accounting.

Region Representation 'Should Be Elected'

Regional district representatives should be elected directly, not appointed from municipal councils, Scott Wallace (SC-Oak Bay) suggested Thursday during a 6½-hour debate on estimates of the Department of Municipal indicated the regional district concept is proceeding well everywhere but in Victoria where a prolonged hospital district dispute over the future of St. Joseph's Hospital is bogging the district down.

The problem may be too many responsibilities for regional board members, Wallace said.

"Can we expect the most efficient discharge of duties when one individual must serve three posts, alderman, regional district representative and regional hospital hospital member?" tive and regional hospital board member?"

He proposed that the home owner grant not be given to people who can afford to live without it, and the grant be increased for lower income

Garde Gardom (L-Vancouver Point Grey) proposed that Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell open up the residential housing mortgage market by making it more attractive for small investors. He said bank savings deposits could be used to finance house construction if small investors lent at a slightly higher rate than the bank interest rate.

Bank savings deposits have nearly quadrupled since 1949.
Gardom said, but the money is lying dead in banks. Money lenders for residential construction should be given an incentive of no taxes on interest from their loans. It would mean more homes and one means the sole source of the said, is that Surrey taxpayers paid only 12.3 per cent of their total taxes that the three biggest social services.

Clark defended the regional district concept. He said Campbell showed good administrative sense by creating regional districts, but should give them more money.

Campbell answered Clark by saying that the govern-ment gives a great deal of money to municipalities.

He showed that for Surrey in 1969, the pirovince contributed more than $7.4 million toward the cost of health, education and welfare. That year, Surrey's bill exceeded

James Lorimer (NDP-

Lornier charged that Houston's letters patent allow Bulkley's land there to be Bulkley's land there to be free from zoning controls, fire, health and education—costs. Moreover, the letters patent permit the elected members of Houston's council to be in a minority against four appointed aldermen.

THAT'S CRICKET

On Bringing Back Civilized Game

By Jack Scott

"Ch, I know that this Little-Bit-of-Olde-England jazz is a little bit of olde film-flam, but I must say I've heen disappointed-chaggined, indeed-to find that Victoria is rather less than a towering citadel

Should the subject strike you as a new low in trivia, even for this space, look at it this way: We face the extinction of the greatest game ever devised by mankind, a game never name moulted as a civilizing antidote to spectatoritis, violence and just generally laws sportsmanship that the win-at-anyurine philosophy of North American sports has come to

Of all the team games that hoys and men play cricket is head and shoulders above the rest in its rewards of tradition, spirit, skill, stamina and applied intelligence. It may be well and truly played by lads of seven or ancients of 70. In either case, they will be gentlemen.

Perhaps "estinction" is an overly strong word as it's disal to the game in Victoria. The tradition runs too deep for it to disappear entirely. Even before the B.C. Cricket Club was formed here in 1852 there were Royal Navy blokes stroking the ball and crying out, "Jolly good!" on the naval green in old Esquinnalt. The Albion Club, still going strong, celebrates its 80th birth date this year. This year, as well. in July. This year. This year, as well, in July. Victoria will be hosting the Canadian inter-provincial tournament when Que bee will doubtless once more take home the Hiram Walker Trophy (all those West Indians who go to McGill make

But the fact is that there are fewer one late after many a long year of treating it with typically median division.

Curiously enough, it was an American, and an ancient one, at that, who opened my eyes. Larry Winship, the editor of the Bostan Giobe, a rough, tough, old Hearst man, was a meet unlikely Anglophile, but he'd fallen popelessly in love with the English life and was flirting with retirement in a thatch-cooled cuttage at Geantchester, a beautiful little willings two miles south of Cambridge on the River Granta. That had been a favoribe haunt of Byron and Rupert Brooke and, indired, Larry's cottage had once been occupied by Berom and so all his pures were open to absorb the atmosphere of the place.

Grantichester is imbedded in cricket fields and Larry, a basefull nut all his life, devotee of the Red Sox, had now become the complete cricket lover. On the Sunday that I drove up from London to visit him he was surrounded by Cambridge undergraduates (who were really there because the Winships had a Dutch au pair girl who was unquestionable the world's loxilest dish) all babbling about the splendars of the game.

Number to get a piece of the conversational action I interjected the Canadian view of the game. Cricket, said I, boldly, was for the birds. The whole idea was based on a editutious poemise. Obviously, said I, the main idea was to hit the wicket with the ball. Since the batsman had an enormous bludgeon to prevent this, the game was bound to be infreminable and dail. Why, said I, I'd bet I could stand up three myself and keep those stumps unsullied for weeks,

The boys fell back on Beron's lawn, holding their sides with laughter, taking their eyes off the splendid Dutch girl far fidily 30 seconds. When they'd recovered I found myself being propelled in an ancient Riley to the nearest pitch. My legs were strapped in pads. My hands were encased in great white mitts. I was handed a but and placed before a wicket in a net enchance used for practice. "The Nursery," they

We'll draw a curtain over the humiliating scene that fullawed and simply record the fact that a cricket ball can be cricker supreinacy. Seems that in 1882 when Australia first beat England it was said that English cricket had died and that the body had been cremated and shipped Down Under. Later, when an English tram avenged the loss, a cricket

In yet another case they've enshrined the bat used by one Albert Thatt when, in 1890, he hit a ball clean over the justilism, a clout that's not been repeated to this day.

Ny guide, that day was explicit in his instructions on how to approach the game as a beginner.

"You must not try to absorb cricket in one sitting," be cautioned me over tea. "Busk in its gentle atmosphere, sook yourself in the deep waters of its technique and it will come to you gradually."

Perhaps that explains why the game - like ballet grome to arouse the prejudices of those watching it for the first time. I was to learn that no other team sport has so many subleties. The purist doesn't simply watch cricket. He studies it, reflects upon it.

Far one thing, there are no "rules," as such, in cricket. Three are, instead, "laws" — 47 of them, to be exact dissigned to cover any situation which might arise, including weather egglitions, spargows struck in flight, lost balls (there were 17 gone incover when the fierce botsmen of Australia played little Eumann back in 1962, still remembered up there as a day of disaster) and the arrival of invasion forces.

Yet none of these edicts intrudes on the kind of cricket that helps to heep so many Britons from turning sedentary. Wherever you travel, in eity or village, you'll see them at pluy on those havely green swards. You see a contest enjoyed in an atmosphere of absolute pleasantness with never a harsh would spoken in anger, above all with that essence of gentlemanly sportsmanship which we've seen crode so budly as games have become spectacles rather than outlets for fun and esservice.

we could cherish as an ornament in our lives.

Women Start Drive To Improve Wages Of Daffodil Pickers

A two-woman campaign to have agricultural labor, and Victoria daffodil workers in particular, brought under minimum wage law restric-tions got off to a small but encouraging start this morning in the office of Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford. Mrs. Kathleen Ruff, 30, acting president of the Voice

'The Gingerbread Lady' Tried Too Hard

It has occurred to some of us that there has been too much attention focused recently on such surface matters as youth, fashion and beauty trends. It must seem to many women that if time could be stopped, and they could wear only the latest in fashion and beauty trends, life would be beautiful.

This kind of superficiality, has caught the notice of Neil Simon, a writer of hit Broadway comedies and movies, who always has a keen eye for social trends.

In his new play, The Gingerbread Lady, he has created a woman who has spent her life on keeping young and fashionable, only to have her husband walk out on playing the character, and she has brought to the role not only her talent but an intimate knowledge of ta-fashion for a long time," Betsy said. "But to be creative in it is quite another thing from being a compulsive fashion consumer. Toby, the woman I play, has turned fashion and beauty care into a fetish.

him?"
Betsy herself has a daughter of that age, but she doesn't give the impression of having spent all her time on "staying young."

For herself, Betsy von Furstenberg has wide-ranging tastes. She has worn designer clothes, but she also loves costume and ethnic looks, often buys in boutiques, and also likes tailored pants.

"In general, I like my clothes casual and my evening things glamorous. I'll wear ruffles, then, too, but there's no law that says only ruffles are feminine!"

Betsy's interest in fashion led her some time ago into designing. At present, she has been doing furs, but she is "dickering with a dress com-pany," as she puts it.
"What I'd like to develon is "Clothing is very important to human psychology, but it should never become a psy-chological crutch. That's what the poor woman finds out in The Gingerbread Lady.

St. Joseph's Auxiliary Needs More Play Ladies

The play ladies at St. Joseph's Hospital hope to have more toys soon - constructive toys so that the convalescent children they work with can build things.

The recent bridge luncheon, sponsored by the Ladies Auxiliary to the hospital, raised $325 to buy toys, renovate and equip the playroom. The event featured a tashion show with clothes provided by Miss Frith's.

The play ladies in their yellow smocks are volunteers who spend two hours morning or afternoon, any day of the week, supervising children in the playroom or going into the wards to read to those who cannot get up to play.

They find it rewarding, particularly when they visit children from up-Island who get few other visitors.

Beatrice Stewart, press secretary for the auxiliary, says the play ladies sometimes show the children how to make artificial flowers to decorate the ward for special occasions or they help with fingerpainting, and "do what anyone would do to entertain a convalescent child."

There are, she says, more yellow smocks for women who would like to join their ranks.

NEW FIBERFORM BOAT

A while ago, in the journal, "Patient Care," Dr. Harry Wiener wrote a fine article about various body odors and how they may be signs and symptoms of certain diseases. Many physicians have agreed with Dr. Wiener that a doctor's nose may sometimes be a useful diagnostic tool. My old professor of medicine used to be able to diagnose typhoid fever by the smell of the patient, and Dr. Abram Höffer, the great Canadian psychiatrist, tells me that schizophrenics, when seriously disturbed as in a delusional flare-up, have a specific and unmistakeable body odor. Usually, there is no odor from a healthy and reasonably hygienic person.

One of the easiest unpleasant odors to diagnose comes from a disease called ozena, which is a crusty inflammation of the nose. Some experts advise the use of a neostigmine solution, sprayed into the nostril four times a day to help in eliminating the trouble. A good doctor should also be able to recognize the bad odor that comes from the mouth of a person who has some large dental $3137:50 comes from the mouth of a person who has some large dental cavities.

A diabetic often has a sweetish-smelling breath. A baby with Phenylketonuria (called PKU for short), a chemical defect that can injure the brain of a newborn infant unless he is quickly given a diet low in phenylalinine (a certain component of food) can have an unpleasant or horsey odor to the breath.

A certain type of bad breath which smells markedly of urine can be a sign that the person's kidneys are in had shape.

can be a sign that the person's kidneys are in bad shape especially if the person is a man past the age of 60. I once had a man in my office with such breath, with lips that were covered with white crystals. Examination showed that the man had a serious prostatic disease.

Foul smelling stobls can be an indication of celiac disease, or a cystic fibrosis of the pancreas, a hereditary disease which affects the lungs and digestion of children.

A "fecal" breath can be an indication of liver disease. If the liver is healthy and normal, it removes all the odor that may be with the intestinal gas that comes up out of the colon. When the liver is not working properly, the foul-smelling gas goes through it and is breathed out through the lungs. Experts say that each day large amounts of colonic gas are removed from the bowel by the liver and the lungs. Also, if the person is under severe stress, as with anxiety, what happens is that the chemical filtering action of the liver is temporarily shut off.

Drying of the mouth can be responsible for the bad breath of some persons when they become nervous, excited, anxious or frightened. The ancient Roman poet Martial spoke of the foul breath of prisoners about to be executed in the arena, and I have noticed the same type of odor on the breath of a person who has oreau or prisoners about to be executed in the arena, and I have noticed the same type of odor on the breath of a person who has been through an upsetting courtroom battle, or on a woman who has been watching her husband die. It plagues a few women when I they are sexually excited. These persons can get help perhaps by taking tranquallings.

OTTAWA - Closely-spaced announcements of TAWA — Closely-spaced announcements are expected within two weeks that the International Joint Commission will sponsor studies of both the Point Roberts and Skagit Valley problem which straddle B.C. Washington state boundaries.

Fisheries and resources minister Jack Davis, in an interview said he expects an announcement "in a week or two" that the U.S. has agreed to an environmental study of the proposed Skagit flooding in B.C. to increase power generation for Scattle.

His statement follows revelations in Washington this week that the Canadian government has agreed to an IJC study of the problems of Pt. Roberts, a U.S. section at the tip of Boundary Bay created by map extension of the 49th parallel but

Chamber Protests Fee Hike

Sidney businessmen have formally requested the 1971-business licence bylaw be rescinded until a "more equitable solution for fixing fees has been arrived at."

At a Sidney council meeting, the businessmen's committee of the Sidney and ing, the observations to the mittee of the Sidney and North Saanich Chamber of Commerce presented a brief suggesting the draft of a new bylaw be submitted to the chamber in writing for consideration and discussion.

This action followed a stormy chamber meeting last week at which 80 merchants voiced objections to increases in their business taxes.

The businessmen's brief says the licence bylaw is highly inflationary, discrim-inatory in its method of levying taxes and easily misinterpreted.

Business licences, it states, should be for control purposes and not to raise general revenue for such things as increased welfare costs.

Mayor Stan Dear spoke briefly to this argument sug-gesting that if a licence is strictly for control, it should be a fixed sum for all to pay. "We would be the only municipality in British Columbia to do this," he

He pointed out that increases in business taxes would have to be passed on to the public.

Another change permits the municipality to bid on tax-sale lands offered to the public. Campbell agreed this was a change from an earlier suggestion that tax-sale lands

OTTAWA (CP) - Former Liberal transport minister Paul Hellyer accused the government before a hushed Commons Thursday of follow-ing morally disastrous economic policies and creating tragedy for thousands of Canadian families.

BACKGROUND:

Suspicion, Fear In Two Pakistans

The outbreak of civil war in East Pakistan is the outgrowth of friction and deep suspicion that has plagued the widely separated halves of Pakistan since the nation was founded with the partition of India in 1947.

The central figure in the current hostilities is Shelk Mujibur Rahman, 51, a veteran fighter for East Pakistan autonomy, who is leader of the powerful Awami (People's) League.

Notary Public Gets 3 Years For Going Too Far Too Fast'

Notary public William E. Williams, 30, of 3115 Parkw, was sentenced Thursday to three years in prison for stealing 3156,439 after he was described by Judge William Ostler as a man who "tried to get too far too fast" at the expense of others.

Williams, who earlier pleaded guilty to two charges of theft by conversion involving 42 counts, committed the thefts between November 1968 and Feb. 16, 1971.

Ostler termed the thefts "larceny on a grand scale" and added that the submission of defence lawyer Robert Heath that the accused was "stumbling in an unmapped wilderness" was hard to accept. night, "killing a lot of unarmed people."

Heath had argued earlier that Williams had opened his notary public business, got into a position he couldn't handle and made the mistake of dipping into the trust fund to cover his financial inepti-tude.

SOCIETY BLAMED

Part of the blame, Heath said, should be on society for allowing notary publics to open businesses without prior training. Radio Pakistan announced the military takeover in the eastern province and the broadcast said all political training.

He said his client had previously worked in positions where he was supervised from above but had started his own business with no training.

Prosecutor J. W. Anderson, however, pointed out that Williams had five years experience in a bank and had been associated with two real estate concerns before starting his business.

Anderson said recoverable assets "by the very best estimates" were under half of the total amount involved.

THAT'S CRICKET

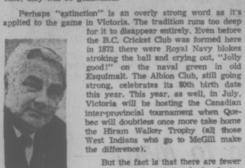

On Bringing Back A Civilized Game

By Jack Scott_

Oh, I know that this Little-Bit-of-Olde-England jazz is a little bit of olde flim-flam, but I must say I've been disappointed-chagrined, indeed-to find that Victoria is rather less than a towering citadel

Should the subject strike you as a new low in trivia, even should the subject strike you as a new but his visit of this space, look at it this way: We face the extinction of the greatest game ever devised by mankind, a game never more needed as a civilizing antidote to spectatoritis, violence and just generally lousy sportsmanship that the win-at-any-price philosophy of North American sports has come to

Of all the team games that boys and men play cricket is head and shoulders above the rest in its rewards of tradition, spirit, skill, stamina and applied intelligence. It may be well and truly played by lads of seven or ancients of 70. In either

Scott than a couple of hundred playing cricketers in these parts, no teams whatsoever in the public school system and so it's hard to see what can keep the game alive and growing. For those who have never played it, the sport is either incomprehensible or laughable, or both, so that there's very little public support or interest. The pity is that we simply don't know what we're missing.

My own enthusiasm may be the result of coming to the game late after many a long year of treating it with typically Canadian derision.

Curiously enough, it was an American, and an ancient one, at that, who opened my eyes. Larry Winship, the editor of the Boston Globe, a rough, tough, old Hearst man, was a most unlikely Anglophile, but he'd fallen hopelessly in love with the English life and was flirting with retirement in a thatch-rooted cottage at Grantchester, a beautiful little village two miles south of Cambridge on the River Granta. That had been a favorite haunt of Byron and Rupert Brooke and, indeed, Larry's cottage had once been occupied by Byron and so all his pores were open to absorb the atmosphere of the place.

Grantchester is imbedded in cricket fields and Larry, a baseball nut all his life, devotee of the Red Sox, had now become the complete cricket lover. On the Sunday that I drove up from London to visit him he was surrounded by Cambridge undergraduates (who were really there because the Winships had a Dutch au pair girl who was unquestionably the world's loviest dish) all babbling about the splendors of the game.

Mainly to get a piece of the conversational action I interjected the Canadian view of the game. Cricket, said I, boldly, was for the birds. The whole idea was based on a ridiculous premise. Obviously, said I, the main idea was to hit the wicket with the ball. Since the batsman had an enormous bludgeon to prevent this, the game was bound to be interminable and dull. Why, said I, I'd bet I could stand up there myself and keep those stumps unsullied for weeks, months, even years.

The boys fell back on Byron's lawn, holding their sides with laughter, taking their eyes off the splendid Dutch girl for fully 30 seconds. When they'd recovered I found myself being propelled in an ancient Riley to the nearest pitch. My legs were strapped in pads. My hands were encased in great white mitts. I was handed a bat and placed before a wicket in a net enclosure used for practice. "The Nursery," they called it. I soon came to think of it as "The Pit."

We'll draw a curtain over the humiliating scene that followed and simply record the fact that a cricket ball can be made to do an astonishing number of things, especially if the man with the bat is a poor ignorant Canadian lout who should have kept his mouth shut.

That began my own education. The very next week I arranged to visit Lord's Cricket Ground in St. John's Wood where an obliging guide took me, first, to see the urn, about four inches in height, that holds the "ashes," symbol of cricket supremacy. Seems that in 1882 when Australia first beat England it was said that English cricket had died and that the body had been cremated and shipped Down Under Later, when an English team avenged the loss, a cricket stump was burned and the ashes were brought back to we

In yet another case they've enshrined the bat used by one Albert Trott when, in 1890, he hit a ball clean over the pavillon, a clout that's not been repeated to this day. My guide that day was explicit in his instructions on how oach the game as a beginner.

"You must not try to absorb cricket in one sitting," he cautioned me over tea. "Bask in its gentle atmosphere, soak yourself in the deep waters of its technique and it will come

Perhaps that explains why the game — like ballet — is so prone to arouse the prejudices of those watching it for the first time. I was to learn that no other team sport has so many subleties. The purist doesn't simply watch cricket. He studies it, reflects upon it.

For one thing, there are no rules, as such, in cricket. There are, instead, "laws" — 47, of them, to be exact—designed to cover any situation which might arise, including weather conditions, sparrows struck in flight, lost balls (there were 17 gone forever when the fierce batsmen of Australia played little Duncan back in 1932, still remembered up there as a day of disaster) and the arrival of invasion forces.

Yet none of these edicts intrudes on the kind of cricket. Wet none of these edicts introdes on the sind of chases, that helps to keep so many Britons from turning sedentary. Wherever you travel, in city or village, you'll see them at play on those lovely green swards. You see a contest enjoyed in an atmosphere of absolute pleasantness with never a harsh word spoken in anger, above all with that essence of gentlemanly sportsmanship which we've seen erode so badly as games have become spectacles rather than outlets for fundance contents.

That is one little bit of olde England, in other words, that

Women Start Drive To Improve Wages Of Daffodil Pickers

A two-woman campaign to have agricultural labor, and Victoria daffodil workers in particular, brought under minimum wage law restirc-tions got off to a small but encouraging start this morning in the office of Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford. Mrs. Kathleen Ruff, 30, acting president of the Voice of Women, and Miss Henriette Pilon of the Victoria Low Income Group met Shelford this morning for an informal discussion of the problem.

Trail Riders Relinquish Park Lease

The Colwood Trail Riders have agreed to surrender their controversial five-year lease on property in Witty's Lagoon Regional Park.

The club's decision follows a meeting with members of the regional district board, Board chairman Hugh Curtis said today the club agreed to drop the lease if members are permitted to use the park as others.

He said the board may have made a mistake in leasing a small portion of the park to the club, but in any event it had been rectified.

Conservation groups had strongly protested the lease.

The club has been given permission to continue using a dwelling on the site as a clubhouse as the regional district has no use for it.

Newsman Ends 52-Year Career

Fifty-two years of service came to an end today for a member of the Times editorial staff.

Lloyd "Pete" Sallaway retired.

Sallaway, 65, began his career with the Times chucking papers as many youngsters do. Then he was put on staff as the office Department and a raise in pay from $6 a week to $8.

Later Pete was named sports editor, a position he held for 23 years. Then he served on the wire desk, the news desk and in the last few years on the financial desk.

During his long career he interviewed many sports celebrities, including former heavyweight champion Joe Louis, wrestling great Ed (Strangler) Lewis, and Abe Saper-stein who put the famed Harlem Globe Tro-ters basketball Jeam on the road in the first breakthrough for the Negro athlete in sport.

He always has retained an interest in sport and at present is president of the Wednesday Commercial Tenpin Bowling A reception was to be held in Sallaway's

In a special referendum today University of Victoria students voted 1,775 to 786 in favor of calling for the resignation of president Bruce Partridge.

There were 167 abstentions in the Alma Mater Society-sponsored vote which saw the highest turnout ever of students in a Uvic vote.

NEW DELHI - Civil war broke out in East Pakistan today as West Pakistan rushed in troops to put down an armed revolt aimed at winning independence for the east area of the partitioned nation.

FREE PARKING IN CAPITAL'S LARGE PARKING LOT

Several years ago while patrolling the dark abyes which was the area below the old grandstand at Royal Athletic Park, a gruff voice rang out.

"Hey Walker," it said. "Come here."

About a week or so later, Pete Sallaway put me on the payroll in the Times sports department.

Tonight Pete retires and this time I best him to the punch. I velicd:

"Hey Sallaway, come here. How would you like to tell all your friends what it's like to look back on a half century with Pete said sure, and now he's got the ball.

After 52 years association with this newspaper — 23 of them as sports editor — and being invited to write a guest column on the eve of retirement, I can only say it will be a matter of touching on the brightest highlights that come to mind through a host of memories.

Being a regular fan of our junior Cougars, my thoughts first turn to hockey. I am one of the few left who can go back to the Stanley Cup victory of Lester Patrick's Cougars on the ice of the old Willows Arena. A mere youngster then, I can never forget the exhibition turned in by Frank Fredrickson—in my opinion one of the most under-rated centre-lee men of my opinion one of the most under-rated centre-ice men of his day.

All eyes were glued to the dazzling play of Howie Morenz and Auriel Joliat, the two vaunted speedsters of the Montreal Canadiens. Unimpressed by all the advance publicity on the prowess of the easterners — Fredrickson not only skated with the great Morenz but also showed him a few tricks in stickhandling wizardry.

Senior amateur hockey was also at its peak on the local scene at the same time with such players as Roy Copas, Hughie Burnett, Alex Straith, Ivan Temple and Louis Glazen—just to name a few — providing entertainment that has never reached the same level since.

Let's not forget Patrick's second edition of the Cougars. Remember how Roger Leger led his whizz kids to those spinetingling overtime victories over Portland and left thousands of tans limp in their progress to the Western Hockey League championship.

To those few fans critical of the junior Cougars — let it be remembered they are still in the stage of learning. Sure they make mistakes but what they lack in tinesse is more than made up in hustle and desire. It's interesting hockey in

Let's leave the winter sports scene and move on to one sport that has provided me with some wonderful moments—golf. How well I remember one of the greatest match-play finals in the history of the sport, in Victoria — George von Elm of Salt Lake City against Bon Stein of Seattle for the Pacific Northwest amateur championship.

Played at Colwood — a real test of skill — it was a battle of two giants with yon Elm the winner. For individual shots, the sporty Oak Bay course was the scene of two that stand out in my memory. The pro who made knickers famous — Gene Sarazen — provided the first thrill. Playing the 11th hole he put his tee shot directly in back of the big tree on the right side of the fairway. Calling for an iron he lofted the ball over the tree and on to the green five feet from the pin and sank the putt for an amazing three.

U.S. Open champion Ralph Guldahl, playing in the Evergreen Open — that's a few years back — was the central figure for the second masterpiece. Short with his drive on the dog-leg 15th, he uncorked a screaming second wood that was never more than 15 feet off the ground and rolled within a foot of the cup. My choice of the perfect skylist goes to former U.S. open champion Johnny Farrell. That may spark some argurr-nts.

From the days of fiery Bill Laird and his pros performing in the ball yard located on the site of the Crystal Garden to the amateur pitching duels between Norm Forbes and Leo Holden, baseball has been one of my favorites.

It produced its share of heartaches locally. Remember Cec Garriott and his Tyees playing to a handful of faithful after clinching the Western International League championship two weeks before the schedule ended. That was just about the knockout blow to the Herculean efforts of Reg Patterson and Johnny Johnson to put pro ball on a paying basis in our town.

hasis in our town.

And here are some anecdotes — Dick Greco's line drive smash that hit one of the lights at Athletic Park when headed for Princess Avenue; pitcher Len Kasparavich wandering around the outfield with a lantern during a foggy night; Bob Jensen with his aspirin ball striking out 16 and walking 17 to win his first start in the WTL; import Joe Dailey pitching a shutout against the famed tousing Japanese All-Stars.

The game led to one big embarrassing moment as player when my boss Archie Wills came up with a 48-point headline "Sallaway hits two home runs." My one bid for fame.

Basketball locally has been hitting the headlines in recent years by the title winning of Rawlings, now known as the Maplettes. But let's not forget the doings of the Blue Ribbons, followed by the Dominoes. Back of their triumphs was the dominant figure of coach Dave Nicol. Controversial and a fighter from the tossup, Nicol led his charges to two national championships. What moments of excitement were provided by the two Chapman brothers, Chuck and Art, the pair of Patricks, Lynn and Muzz, Doug Peden (Til go along with the choice of Peden as this provinces' greatest athlete of the century) Joe Ross, Tommy Little and Johnny Craig!

My one and only experience as a promoter took me into the world of boxing. At the urging of Dr. Jack Patterson and Roy Simmons of a local club I agreed to have this newspaper back an Island championship tournament. It was an affair with a $3,000 nut to crack and I was certain my superiors would not appreciate a loss . . In addition all profits were to be turned over to the crippled children.

Imagine my feelings when a snowstorm broke just before the start of the first night's proceedings. However, the affair proved the most successful amateur boxing attraction in history with near sell-out crowds both nights. The promotion was mainly a profitable one and my reputation as a promoter history with near sell-out crowds both nights. The promotion was mainly a profitable one and my reputation as a promoter was established through the great co-operation of two Navy chaps, J. C. I. (Dufchy) Edwards and Bob Dewhirst.

Then there are the fishing memories. My fellow worker Bill Walker, whose column these ramblings are replacing, provided the best of all. Trolling for salmon at Brentwood he got a strike. Then his rod took a giant bend as we both shouted "bottom." After some heavy reelling he managed to take in some line and it continued to come in slowly. What had happened? His original strike—jackspring—had been swallowed by a 40-pound codfish. Yes, we landed them both. Two for one so to speak.

Landing three springs—43½ pounds, 37½ and 35 on a spoon that had never caught a fish before and after I had left my proverbial jinx, the wife, sound asleep back at the hotel in Port Alberni is another fond memory. Borrowing a spoon and fly from Frank Sommer and hooking a 17½ pound cohoe at Cowichan Bay to win the prize of the week much to his chagrin, is another.

I regret that there are some sports and many fine athletes I have failed to mention. But it has been a great 52 years, and the sports world in general has provided me with some great and memorable moments.
